RICK WAKEMAN

Ladies and gentlemen — you are about to see one of the greatest spectacles known to science! Ignore the paper darts sailing overhead and the plastic cups being crunched underfoot, and focus your attention on the mass of keyboards, even now emitting unhealthy warm-up squeaks; the music stands a-flutter with sheaves of papers, and the odd roadie frantically ferreting for kinks in the cables.

Soon an impressive figure with flowing robes and streaming golden hair will stride on stage and send a shock of recognition pulsating through your nerve ends. He's the fire chief complaining about those kids sitting in the centre aisles. But after him — music!

Rick and friends (one hundred plus at the last check-in) hope you enjoy the show, because they have put a lot of hard work into bringing old-fashioned unashamed entertainment back into popular music. But apart from all that, a serious venture lurks beneath the impressive logistics. There's an orchestra, a group, a choir, and top international ice skaters waiting in the wings, but they have come to work together on a project that represents a dream come true for the supremely likeable and talented Mr. Wakeman.

A classically trained pianist, Rick has achieved international fame over the past four years, from his work within the ever expanding horizons of rock.

He attained a grounding in all kinds of music when he became one of the most in demand young session musicians in London working with everybody from Cat Stevens to T. Rex and David Bowie. He became known to a wider public when he joined the Strawbs, a band led by Dave Cousins that was rapidly branching out from folk roots.

His keyboard wizardry ultimately flowered when he was invited to join Yes and that immaculate technique was applied not only to the piano and organ, but Moog synthesiser, Mellotron and electric pianos. In an age of singers and guitarists, Rick became a star, not only due to his undoubted technique, but in his ability to communicate to audiences.

But there was more that Rick had to achieve, and his innate desires to write as well as play, meant that the composer Wakeman had to find room for expression. Eventually there was a parting of ways, and in the summer of '74 he left Yes to concentrate on his own music. He had already performed his first solo concert, at the Royal Festival Hall, London, in January, when "Journey" received a rapturous audience response and critical acclaim. And the 'live' LP from the concert, joined his first solo album "The Six Wives of Henry VIII" in gaining 'gold' status.

Rick's composition, inspired by his favorite childhood reading, the Jules Verne science fiction masterpiece, was his first extended work, on which he was helped by arrangers Wil Malone and Danny Beckerman.

It was originally intended to be a one-off concert, and the cost of presenting Rick with the London Symphony Orchestra and English Chamber Choir conducted by David Measham, seemed daunting. But a second performance at London's Crystal Palace in the summer proved another success, and finally the plunge was taken — a full American tour, with the finest musicians available!

The American tour lasted a month, coast to coast including Canada and was probably the most ambitious musical project rock and roll has seen. Even so during the long flights between gigs, Rick was already formulating ideas for his next venture and newest album "The Myths and Legends of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table".

How does Rick feel about his "King Arthur" project, now the album's out?

"Although it's all about King Arthur and the legends and stories it's as much about me as Arthur pulling out the sword from the stone is like taking an opportunity of a career in music and not abusing it.

"Everybody wants to be best in their field, and a lot of it is down to believing that you can do something."

How does he view the various constituent parts of "Arthur"?

"'Guinevere', was a song about six years old from before 'Henry' (Rick's first album), while 'Lancelot And The Black Knight' is the story of Lancelot going to the waste lands and conquering, which is a parallel with the music industry, because once you've written something, you've got to go out and prove it, take knocks and scrapes.

"'Merlin The Magician' is in three parts. I read several different stories about Merlin and I always imagine him as a little old man preparing his potions, so the first theme is very quiet.

"Then I read another story which describes him in the lower parts of the castle, surrounded by bottles and liquids like a mad professor, which is the second part, and then there is a story how he falls in love with a 17-year-old damsel, and I thought it was funny, this old man chasing after the maiden.

"Eventually she locks him in a cave where he dies. So I had a silent movie sequence to describe him running round after the young girl through the woods, played on a banjo.

"During the last bit of narration all the main themes come in, and at the very end, after it's all died away, it comes back with the 'Arthur' theme again, because people did believe Arthur would return to save England. The 'Arthur' theme recurs throughout the album.

"We finished the album on January 11 and flew out to Japan on the twelfth. What a joke! Japan was hysterical — the audiences were so good.

"The band have got a lot more to play now, and I gave them parts for 'Arthur' that even I couldn't play.

"We were happy with the way 'Journey' worked despite the fact in America it got criticised, but in a strange way we had played it safe inasmuch as a band and orchestra hardly played together.

"We worked out why rock and classical orchestras hadn't worked well together in the past. We came to the conclusion that everybody had tried to get the orchestra either to play dead straight or rock with the group, which sounds horrible.

"If you give the orchestra simple lines to play it's boring because you're not using them to the full.

"We thought it would be interesting to get the band to play to fit with the orchestra.

"'Arthur' has turned out better than I envisaged and that's due a lot to the lads in the band and working with Wil again. Everybody had learnt so much from 'Journey' and this album will lay a foundation for the next one.

"Hopefully it'll be something on the gods of mythology — a Suite of Gods. That idea came from a piece of music I was going to use for 'Arthur'.

"I don't know how many gods I'll use, there are thousands of the buggers. They do tend to get around a bit. It'll be nice to get Thor in and Zeus."

Foolish pipe dreams? They have a habit of turning into reality when Rick rolls up his cape, hurls back a pint of bitter and charges into action.

THE ENGLISH ROCK ENSEMBLE

Due to your tremendous support regarding the "Arthur" album the Band have decided that it is only fair to change their names. The "old and the new" appear below.

ASHLEY HOLT new nameSIR FATMAN performing on vocals and weight watching.

Ashley's new name is blatantly obvious to those having eyes with a built in wide angle lens. Ashley has appeared in many advertisements including such famous ads as the "Playtex Holdall Garment", which was filmed in cinemascope, and in the "before and after" ads, Ashley insisted he was not to play the before part all the time. His agent agreed with him and now Ashley plays the well before parts. Before he joined the band Ashley was undoubtedly my favourite group and since joining us uses up most of the stage area, dressing rooms and band's beer.

1 36" Military style bass drum and assorted percussion.

GARY PICKFORD HOPKINS new nameSIR SINK performing on vocals and sanitary fittings.

Gary's big dream in life was to own a horrific bathroom and fill it full of beautiful women. On tours he has almost fulfilled his ambition with the exception that the adjectives need to be exchanged. A remarkable singer, Gary is capable of singing through his bum, but unfortunately we had to stop him doing this as he used to leave deposits on stage while he was clearing his throat.

BARNEY JAMES new nameSIR POSER performing on drums and bums.

Barney likes to be known as "Amant" which he claims stands for a man afraid of no terror. However the band wish to make it clear that we claim it stands for all mouth and no trousers. His physique resembles that of a dog most probably a cross between a dachund and a poodle.

JEFFREY CRAMPTON new nameSIR DISASTER performing on guitars (when he remembers them)

Jeffrey can easily be recognised surrounded by hundreds of guitar cases and having a glum look of despair on his face, as the chances are he's left his guitars at home. He is a natural at getting himself and females into trouble. At the moment he is in the midst of completing his new book "The world population and how I helped it without really trying".

JOHN HODGSON new nameSIR PARALETIC performing on percussion, betting and cider.

In the interests of the world 'Hodgy' is leaving his liver to Watney's breweries, not as you may think for research, but it is firmly believed throughout the band that if his liver was put through a mangle, we could collect anything upwards of four thousand barley wines. Hodgy is also a confirmed member of Alcoholics Unanimous, which means that at any time of the day you can call him if you fancy a drink. Hodgy will then take you to the nearest pub where in exchange for his company you can buy him a drink.

Roger is so called because he weighs four pounds, which by a strange coincidence happens to be his alcohol spending allowance for the year. Due to Roger we can only play in certain countries during the winter that he migrates to. His ribs have served useful purposes during previous tours when the xylophone broke down.

DAVID MEASHAM

After several years as a leading orchestral musician in England (Principal Violin LSO etc.) David Measham has now emerged as an international conductor in his own right.

At present he holds the position of Principal Conductor of the Australian Broadcasting Commission's West Australian Symphony Orchestra in Perth. He took up this post in March 1974 and returned in January 1975 for his second season.

During the past two years he has appeared in public with the London Symphony Orchestra, Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, New Philharmonic Orchestra, American Symphony Orchestra of New York and the Bergen Festival Orchestra in Norway.

He has been active in the recording studio too, recording symphonies and other works by Barber, Kabalevsky and Miaskovsky with the London Symphony Orchestra and the New Philharmonia Orchestra, and has also been awarded a second Gold record for conducting:

"Journey to the Centre of the Earth".

Measham has been musically involved with many leading personalities in the contemporary rock field ranging from The Who — he directed the second version of "Tommy" receiving a Gold Disc — to Ornette Coleman and Jack Nitzche, not to mention Neil Young and a new album recreation of "Sgt. Pepper."

He renewed his close working relationship with Rick Wakeman in Rick's latest album which he conducted for the new recording as he does for these first performances.

DAVID MEASHAM conductor (92 bus route from Southall) new name SIR STICKTHING.

What a sight David is to behold. This bearded wonder prancing about with his baton (at least we think it is his baton) in his hand, wearing his second hand blue barbers jacket and yeti boots. David spends a lot of time down under, and goes to Australia a lot too. It is reputed that he would have a kangaroo if it stopped hopping. He is lovingly known as the Monster Meash.

TERRY TAPLIN

Terry, Narrator for 'Arthur' was trained at the Royal Academy and has acted on Broadway twice. He dropped out and went to Spain, where he rapidly became both brown and broke, and therefore decided to return to the acting factory at Stratford-on-Avon, followed by a brief spell of not seeing eye to eye with Laurence Olivier at the National Theatre.

He was the youngest actor ever to take over the part of Creon in Oedipus, directed by Peter Brooke, and starring Sir John Geldug as Oedipus, and was asked to play Horatio in Hamlet at Stratford (also Long John Silver, but refused to have a leg amputated).

He joined Peter Brook's futuristic production of Midsummer Night's Dream, playing the part of Lysander, and after a successful run on Broadway went on a full American tour. The production was nominated for an "Emmy" award in New York, and a world tour followed.

Terry has just finished filming the new "Alfie" movie with Alan Price. He met Rick inside a bottle of Vat 69. His hero is Flash Gordon and his favourite singer is Florence Foster.

We are proud to announce that last year Terry was given the Queen's Award to Industry. Not a fit man, Terry often claims to having spent many hours under par. His drama teacher (Sir Arnold Par) speaks very highly of him however, Terry was our narrator throughout the American, Australian and Japanese tours, and it was not a difficult decision to decide to use him again on Arthur due to such outstanding qualities as being cheap, willingness to sleep rough, paying all his own expenses and being a first class drunkard.

Tony is undoubtedly Britain's answer to Desperate Dan, or Desperate Dad as we call him. Dad is loved by everybody although obviously his wife gets first refusal. Tony was once known as the loudest bass player in Buckinghamshire as a lot of deaf drummers who played with him will tell you. Tony was teetotal on joining the band but is rapidly approaching the "Hodgy standard".

An honest man, Brian has often told me that listening to my music brings a great lump to his wallet. Kindness is another great virtue of Brians, why only the other day I had a puncture on my bicycle while cycling to a gig in Scotland and he offered to come out with a new tyre in his rolls royce and only charge me petrol expenses. Brian is easily recognisable by his huge nose which in the winter doubles as a fleas ski slope.

OUR HOST OF ICE STARS

REG PARK

Reg is an Australian Champion, he has lived for years in England and has travelled the world as a principal skater with leading ice shows.

For several consecutive years he has starred in the big ice pantomimes at the Empire Pool Wembley — in addition to portraying a leading character in the story, Reg has also been responsible for the choreography.

PATRICIA PAULEY

Patricia first won a championship at Wembley when she was only five years of age.

A British Champion three years running, she was Gt. Britain's representative in the Olympic Games at Squaw Valley, California, U.S.A. and placed 6th in the World Championships in Paris in the same year.

She appeared in a leading role in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at the Empire Pool, Wembley, followed by a successful tour of Germany with the Scala Eis Revue.

In 1964/5 she starred in Dick Button's "Ice Extravaganza in New York" at the World's Fair Exhibition, and played a leading role in the Christmas production of "Aladdin".

MARK HOLMES

Mark is one of the personality boys from the Empire Pool Wembley big ice pantomimes and last year played with great success the part of "Abanazar" in the "Aladdin" production.

The festival vocal group are one of the most versatile in the country, all members having had classical training at some time in their careers.

The group was formed in 1974 by John Parry, who is the lead bass with a view to singing a much larger range of material.

They made a tape of an unaccompanied arrangement of Mozart's "Ave Verum" and sent it to Rick, after which he wrote some unaccompanied music for the group. The result can be heard on "King Arthur". Within the group there is a Barbershop quartet called the "Boston Barbers" who have just finished a T.V. Series with Frankie Howard.
